

Contributors

Peter Hulme is Professor in Literature at the University of Essex. His most recent books are Remnants of Conquest: The Island Caribs and their Visitors, 1877-1998, (OUP, 2000), and two co-edited projects, The Tempest and Its Travels (Reaktion Books, 2000), and the forthcoming Cambridge Companion to Travel Writing (CUP, 2002).

Cathleen Maslen is finishing her doctorate at the University of Western Australia. She presented an earlier version of this paper at a conference, "Token Transgressions: Confronting the Cultural Lie", University of Exeter, 1998.

Sue Thomas is the author of The Worlding of Jean Rhys (Greenwood, 1999), co-author (with Ann Blake and Leela Gandhi), of England Through Colonial Eyes in Twentieth Century Fiction (Palgrave, 2001), and compiler of Elizabeth Robbins (1862-1952): A Bibliography (University of Queensland Press, 1994), and many other titles in the Victorian Research Guides Series. She has published extensively on late nineteenth and twentieth-century women's writing and decolonising literatures. She is Reader in English and Coordinator of the English Program in the School of Communication, Arts and Critical Enquiry at La Trobe University, Melbourne.

Erika J. Waters is a professor of English at the University of the Virgin Islands, St. Croix campus. She has published various articles and reviews on Caribbean literature, with a special focus on early women writers. She co-edited Critical Issues in Caribbean Literature (1984) and Contemporary Drama of the Caribbean (2002); edited New Writing from the Caribbean (1994), and is Editor of The Caribbean Writer.